In an effort to produce quality products to ensure the health of the world community, standardization of employee competencies is required and recognition of the competence of Human Resources (HR) by a Professional Certification Agency that has conducted an assessment of the company's main competencies.

The standard of HR qualification needs is manifested in the Special Work Competency Standards for the Field of Expertise which is a reflection of the competencies that are expected to be possessed by people or someone who will work in that field. In addition, these standards must also have equivalence and equality with relevant standards that apply to the pharmaceutical industry sector that apply internationally.

"By becoming an LSP, it will provide recognition for employee competencies in carrying out work based on the standards set, as well as maintaining the required competencies within the scope of Holding BUMN Pharmaceuticals to increase the company's competitiveness, both at national and international levels," said Disril.

Not only in the context of human resources but also in a constructive context because it makes our competitiveness nationally and internationally accountable in order to improve the country's competence. Therefore, one of the functions of BNSP says that we must develop an Indonesian certification system for national and international recognition. In the future, developments related to medicine and health depend on us."
